I later realized that this small area of the city is kind of not that good, and that these places were selling for 110-120k. There are some black people and Mexicans on this building, not that I have anything against them). "Common charges" are $350/mo. I'm going to try the potpourri thing, if not to annoy the guy, to try to mitigate the stench. I might try one of those shomer-tec devices, since they're cheap enough. I might also get one of those hidden camera locator/bug locator things, just for the heck of it. I don't think the guy is 'bugging' me, but it might be fun just to see if there was ever a 'bug' placed in this unit over the years. It's not so much the actual noise that upsets me. It's the fact that I don't want this guy hearing my conversations on the phone. I always go to my car to make calls, and I don't invite friends over, because of this.

I received an annual report of drinking water contaminant levels for the complex's tap water. The 'combined' uranium (or maybe radium) levels were 4.53, and it says the EPA regulatory limit is 5. I can't find out what the national average is, so I don't know if this is considered a lot, or if most tap water levels around the country are above 4.

I would focus on the loud noises in the very early hours part. Do you have a brother or a male friend who can go to this guy's front door with you at a reasonable time say 2pm on a Friday and simply ask him to keep it down because you are losing sleep and it is not acceptable. I know it is very easy to think that a polite word is not going to work but some people are just big teenagers and act out and like to test boundaries, they often respond well to finding out the boundary in a civilized and non aggressive manner. is there some kind of tenancy agreement with the management company regarding smoking? perhaps you could lobby the management to make it a non smoking building? I lived in a fourth floor apartment once and there were strict rules about not having washing machines or other loud equipment running after midnight and before 8am. the tenant above me flouted this and after a week I told the building manager and he spoke to him and it never happened again.

They'll die of cancer in 2 years.  I bought a small, 1br 700sq ft condo about a year ago. The walls are extremely thin and the people above me have fake hardwood floors. I work from home, but I'm out of the condo at least 4-5 hours a day doing stuff. I assumed that the person above me had a job or at least left the house every so often. A couple days after I moved in, the person above me started to literally yell loudly if I did something not to their liking. If I ran the faucet too often, the person would yell stuff like "GO AHEAD, GET ANOTHER DRINK OF WATER!". He stopped doing stuff like that, but he still harasses me occasionally. Sometimes, he will follow me around and drop stuff right above my head. If I do the dishes, he will start bouncing a ball right above me, then when I go to the bathroom or the next room, I'll hear him walk over also and start doing it in that area. It's like this guy is obsessed with me.  Also, every single morning, I get woken up at 3, 4, and 5am on the dot by him dropping something extremely heavy directly above my bed, or stomping loudly with his shoes on the faux hardwood floors, while I'm sleeping. This person is so crazy. I don't even think he sleeps. He never leaves his place and doesn't have a job. Also, he chainsmokes in his unit, because my place smells like smoke non-stop, and I have allergies because of it. I know it's him, because I know the people on the other sides of me, and one of them doesn't smoke, and the other person does it outside, and the smell from that goes away within minutes, because of the wind and air. But the person above me must smoke with no ventilation or anything, nonstop. All my clothes and everything in my unit smells of smoke. I light candles and have 2 air purifiers, but they don't even put a dent in it. But the main thing is the person stomping and dropping stuff above me, every morning/night, at 3am, 4am, and 5am, on the dot. I have no idea what this person has against me. I guess they're just pissed off because someone bought the unit below them, after it being vacant for 6+ months, and because they don't have completely privacy. This guy just never, ever leaves. He hasn't left in 3 days. Every time I come home and see his car in the parking lot, I get depressed. I've literally only seen him a handful of times in the parking lot, while leaving or coming home. I just say hello, and usually he doesn't even acknowledge me, or just says "hi" back. It's so bizarre. I put the condo back on the market, literally a month after moving in, and still haven't found a buyer. I'll probably lose between 25 and $30,000 (I didn't do enough research and overpaid around $20,000 more than it's actually worth), but I'm willing to take the hit to get away from this lunatic. I'm literally afraid of this guy, and I can't relax at all. Quoting: Anonymous Coward 927572
